Issued by PhotoLogiX, March/April 2009

Book 'Crossroad Europe': cultural differences in text and images

Is Europe boring? Not if you are interested in people! Dutch photographer Bruno van den Elshout dedicated one year to travelling around the European Union to meet people from all 27 EU-countries. Throughout his journey, Van den Elshout spoke to more than 2 500 young Europeans about their daily lives. The book 'Crossroad Europe' summarises his impressions and was published by PhotoLogiX on 23 March 2009.

About the book:

Containing more than 120 portrait photos and 135 scenic impressions, 'Crossroad Europe' takes its readers along on a journey through all 27 EU member states. Whilst en route, readers are being introduced to more than 500 young Europeans, who tell about their countries, customs, worries and expectations for the future. 'Crossroad Europe' serves as an inspiring starting point for explorations into Europe's marvellous cultural diversity.

About the author:

Bruno van den Elshout (1979, The Hague - NL) has been working as an independent photographer and journalist since 1999. During recent years, he expanded his work terrain to gradually make it encompass the entire European Union. Exhibitions previously prepared by Van den Elshout include 'The face of Europe', 'Passport, please!' and 'La vida local'. His work is best described as realistic and authentic, while daily life serves as a continuous source of guidance and inspiration.
